A WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

Greetings to all!

While still waiting for warmer days on a regular basis, we are sending you the Spring 2022 edition of Le Mercien. You will notice a new focus on more recent historical stories about our family members.

Thanks to our Facebook Members Group, Association des Mercier d'Amérique du Nord, now with more than 700 members, we can reach a lot of Mercier families in various regions. We must acknowledge that the Facebook approach opens the door to communications with Merciers that we would not otherwise get to know. Gilmond has been maintaining our contacts since the very beginning and his perseverance is paying off! People have beautiful stories to tell us.

In another new trend, we want to talk about cousins related to Merciers through their mother, and whose life experience has been out of the ordinary. We will start with my cousin Jean Racine, who not only has a famous name, but who lived the history of modern Quebec from the 1970s to 2005, as a bodyguard to our Quebec Premiers. It is a fascinating and surprising story!

Thanks to the generous cooperation of Ms. Christine Lasalle, Céline Mercier and Claudette Beaulne, descendants of Antonio Mercier, we will run a five-part series of articles about Mercier families in the Outaouais area.

We are looking for contacts who will have stories about Mercier families from various regions of the United States and Canada. We are especially inviting Quebecers from the Abitibi, Gaspésie, Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean and the North Shore areas to please contact us if you can help at: famillesmercier1985@gmail.com.

Thank you again for reading this and we hope to see you again quite soon!

*Jacques Mercier,

PROTECTING OUR PREMIERS AND FOREIGN DIGNITARIES

Part 1

By Jean Racine
"Bodyguard for Quebec Premiers from René Lévesque to Jean Charest"

I am the son of Pauline Mercier and Paul Racine, both born in the town of Black Lake. I grew up in the early 1950s with my brother Roger in that area, which visitors often considered to be repulsive, with its mounds of grey asbestos residues and its gaping holes. There were also the sirens, just like in a war, announcing an imminent explosion to split up the blocks of stone. A movie by Arthur Lamothe "Poussière sur la ville" was the last nail in the coffin for my town's reputation.

Behind that less than enchanting decor, I had quite a happy childhood, in part because although toiling in the mines was hard, the pay was high. Most families had sufficient income to buy a house, a recent model car and often also a cottage by one of the eighteen lakes in the area. In fact, that region is one of the most diversified in Quebec, with a number of lakes, mountains for skiing, as well as forests nearby for hiking and numerous farms.

In an interview at TVA NOUVELLES in 2016.
"Bodyguard: Learning how to Manage the Unpredictable".

Along with my Mercier cousins, we formed a very tightly knit group and we had great fun together. I hold a great debt of gratitude towards them, since I was the youngest in that group of cousins. These good people taught me a lot.

From a very young age I had a passion for aviation, but in school, when a career counsellor subjected us to aptitude tests, each time, the first profile that came up in my case was that of a police officer. When my father suggested it, to please him, I applied to the Sûreté du Québec. What good parents I had! I knew my chances of getting in were only 3% at the time and that I would become a pilot one day, so I thought why not? I passed all the tests and to my great surprise, I was selected! The success made me happier than thinking about the future that awaited me, for I was sure one day I would be a pilot.

At the Police Institute, I discovered my inclination to want to help people. I adored the paramilitary training. When I became a police officer at the age of nineteen, I found myself at the Headquarters of the Sûreté du Québec, assigned to various postings, including guarding Premier Robert Bourassa's apartments at the National Assembly. That is when I discovered my new passion, watching Mr. Bourassa's bodyguards do their work.

When I was transferred in 1972 to the beautiful Beauce region, I had the experience of being a patrol officer for almost seven years. That was very useful and important training for a policeman's career.

After applying several times for a position as a bodyguard, I was finally invited to take the required tests, which I passed successfully. In 1978, at the age of 26, I was assigned for the first time to the protection detail of this great Premier, Mr. René Lévesque, who was five foot and four inches (1,62 m) tall. Some liked him and some did not, but everyone respected him. I was myself six feet two inches (1,87 m), and I was always running behind him, because he was always on the go.

I want to state that the function of a Premier's bodyguard is to protect the Premier and this function is entrusted to the Sûreté du Québec, so political affiliation never enters into consideration. I must add that I have an unlimited admiration for every one of them. Every Premier gives part of his life for what he believes to be best for Quebec. He faces challenges during his term and then he gets turned out of office. Upon his passing, he gets plaudits for his accomplishments and then he gets a statue. Just like an artist, he becomes famous only after he has died.

Visit to a Fishery Products Plant in Gaspésie.*

During the referendum campaign in 1980, we travelled to all the regions of Quebec. I was on the stage the evening when the referendum results came out. The atmosphere was tense. A revolution could have occurred any minute. And then this great man took the microphone and said: "If I understood you correctly, you are saying until next time". A great sadness overcame the place and the crowd rallied in tears.

During the election campaign in 1981, the polls said that Mr. Lévesque would lose, but he got another victory. Once again, we toured all of Quebec. The last days of the campaign were difficult. When you got up in the morning, you wondered where you were: in Gaspé? in Sherbrooke? in Gatineau?

Premier Lévesque made an official trip to Belgium and France. In Brussels, he met with King Beaudoin in his castle. The protocol officer led the Premier's entourage to a waiting room, then on another level, his closest aides were dismissed. Determined to do my job, I went with him to the last door. We were both greeted by the King himself. In matters of security, it is better to do too much than not enough. I am definitely on the side of excess caution.

A French government jet took our delegation on a flight from Brussels to Le Bourget airport. Once at our destination, Mr. Lévesque was invited to review the guard of honour and I remained by his side. There was an impeccable red carpet leading to the convoy of more than 20 vehicles preceded by 15 motorcyclists, all wearing black frock coats lined in red, and riding in a V formation of honour ahead of the convoy.

I was then invited to sit on the right-hand side in the front seat of the limousine. I was at that moment the only bodyguard in the car with the Prime Minister of France, Mr. Raymond Barre and our Premier, as passengers. What class our French friends were demonstrating. I was starting to be really impressed and we were not even on our way yet.

When we started toward Paris, intersections were blocked, and other vehicles were directed to the edge of the road by the motorcyclists. When the convoy entered Paris, we continued without reducing our speed, and the lanes were cleared for us around the Arc de Triomphe on our way to the Élysée Palace. Once there, I opened the car door for Premier Lévesque and then followed him up those very well-known steps toward the man waiting for him: the President of France, Mr. Valéry Giscard d'Estaing. After a handshake and photos, I then followed them into the Élysée Palace. I was still the only bodyguard there. At that precise moment I was truly most impressed.

We toured Hôtel de Matignon, the residence of Prime Minister Raymond Barre, and then we went to the Hôtel de Ville de Paris to meet Mr. Jacques Chirac, Mayor of the city. It all felt so unreal and beyond comprehension.

I was far from thinking that a few years later, I would be preparing detailed plans for such visits, including convoys, with secured, alternate, and emergency itineraries, often involving more than a hundred police officers. We also secured sites using canine units, explosives technicians, an intelligence security service, and a command post. I will stop here because the list would be too long. I also had the opportunity to deploy those plans for visiting French Prime Ministers and other foreign dignitaries.

In 1985, surrounded by my colleagues from Quebec City, in the room next to the Red Room of the National Assembly. Mr. René Lévesque had just resigned as Premier of Quebec.

THE FAMOUS YEAR 1984.

In May, Corporal Denis Lortie entered the Quebec Parliament building heavily armed. I was right across the street, in Complex J, where Premier René Lévesque's offices were located. A young receptionist at the National Assembly, whom I knew quite well, came towards me covered with blood and walking unsteadily in the entrance to building J. She collapsed in my arms crying, telling me that the blood on her was her colleague's who was just gunned down by a soldier who had stormed the National Assembly.

Premier Lévesque was in a safe location and the young woman was being helped. I used an unmarked police vehicle with lights and siren on to get to the Minister of Justice, Mr. Pierre-Marc Johnson, because we were also responsible for his security.

On my way to get him, I called our command post and requested to be allowed to enter the National Assembly with Mr. Johnson. The tactical intervention team (SWAT) of the SQ was already in position inside the building and we could safely go in. Under police escort, I went inside the familiar building with Mr. Johnson. Elevator doors, walls and fire extinguishers were riddled with submachine gun bullets and the floor was splattered with blood in several places.

and Labrador

The Sergeant-At-Arms, Mr. René Jalbert, had started talking with Corporal Lortie, who had been sitting in the Speaker of the National Assembly's chair in the Blue Room, and he had managed to convince him to follow him to his office. When I approached a member of the SWAT team, lying prone with his precision weapon in the central staircase leading to the restaurant Le Parlementaire, I could see through the window the back of Corporal Lortie, who was talking with Mr. Jalbert. That was a few minutes before he surrendered to the police. How could such an event ever happen in Québec? Security measures were totally changed forever following that attack.

In August 1984, there was the grand parade of the Tall Ships (Grands Voiliers) in Quebec City. We had to prepare for the transportation of the Premier to visit the site, possibly using the Sûreté du Québec helicopter to do so. But a newspaper article read: if you wish to go to Quebec City, it would be better for you to leave your car in Drummondville and take the bus. Afraid of massive traffic jams, Quebecers chose to watch the event on television. It was in fact very easy to get to the site and walk about.

In September 1984, Pope John Paul II came to Quebec. Level VI security had to be put into place, which was the highest level possible. It was quite impressive to be so close to the Pope at all the events he attended: a reception at the Musée du Québec, a mass at the Université Laval campus, and then a meeting with the Prime Minister of Canada, Mr. John Turner. In 1985, there was a meeting between Premier René Lévesque and President Ronald Reagan at the Château Frontenac.

In 2005, during a rare time off, while grocery shopping with my wife, I received a call on my cell phone. My wife asked what was happening and I told her that the Pope had died. "So what happens now?" she asked. Well, tomorrow evening, I will have to be in Rome to prepare for the visit of our Premier, Mr. Jean Charest! That was the hectic life of a bodyguard, no less.

MERCIER FAMILIES IN THE OUTAOUAIS (Part 1 of 5)

Here is the first of five articles about Mercier families in the Outaouais. They were first published in L'histoire des familles de L'Ange-Gardien, published in 2012. They were updated in 2022. This text is reproduced with the author's permission.

Antonio MERCIER's family with Marie Anne Lorette (Anna) PLOUFFE, his first wife and then Hilda LAVERGNE, his second wife.

By Céline Mercier, daughter of Jacques Mercier and Claudette Beaulne, and a goddaughter of Antonio and Hilda.

At the age of 26, in 1647, Julien Mercier left the Grandinière, near Tourouvre in the Perche region, in France, to come and settle in New France. In 1651, he was granted the concession of a plot of land along the Saint-Lawrence, on the coast of Beaupré, east of the present location of Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré basilica. In 1654, at Notre-Dame-de-Québec parish, he wed Marie Poulain. Together, they had 10 children.

It was only 8 generations later that my great-grandfather, whose name was also Julien (1870-1954), was the first of the Mercier family to settle in the municipality of Buckingham Canton, in the Glen-Almond area. His was nicknamed the "p'tit Julien" (little). It is true that he was not very tall, but his father and his grandfather were also named Julien, so the nickname was used to differentiate them. His father (1837-1908) was nicknamed the "tall Julien", and his grandfather (1801-1885) was the "old Julien".

Julien Mercier and Rose-Anne Lalonde

The "p'tit Julien" was married 3 times over his whole life. He was married for the first time on August 4, 1887, to Rose de Lima Bisson. After Rose de Lima died, Julien married Rose-Anne Lalonde on January 28, 1905. A few years later, having become a widower again, Julien married his third wife, Rose Rochon on August 17, 1927. While no child was born during the third marriage, 21 children were born during the first two, including Antonio, my grandfather, who was the eldest son of the 2nd marriage.

When Julien arrived in the Municipality of Buckingham Canton, he bought 300 acres of land adjacent to the Municipality of Mulgrave & Derry, on August 24, 1901. Years later, he would divide the property into 3 parts measuring more or less 100 acres each. He sold those lots to the following people.

The 1st lot went to his son Damien Mercier on March 14, 1918; after Damien died of the Spanish flu, Edmond Pedneaud, married to Dorcina Mercier (ninth child of Julien), bought the land on November 18, 1918. The 2nd lot went to his son Antonio on March 10, 1928. And finally, the 3rd lot was sold to Servini Charrette on July 2, 1930. Julien had started to work his land to prepare it for seeding or grazing, but the work was completed by the new owners.

Antonio married on October 13, 1926, Marie Anne Lorette Plouffe (Anna), who gave him 12 children as follows: Reine (who married Horace Tremblay), G rard (who married Lucienne Bouladier and had 5 children), Georgette (who married Jean-Guy Bouladier and had 7 children), Fernand, Marcel (who married Madone Gu nette and had 2 children), Antonine (who married Jean-Guy Lasalle and had 2 children), Rh a (who married Yves Carri re and had 3 children), Arthur (who married Th r se David and had 2 children), Lorraine (who married Clifford Ivall and had 2 children), Jacques (who married Claudette Beaulne and had 3 children), Murielle, and Maurice (who married Odette S guin). On October 30, 1944, Anna died at the age of 35.

Antonio and his 1st wife, Anna

Two years later, on November 30, 1946, Antonio married his second wife, Hilda Lavergne, and they had 6 children as follows: Lise, Gis le (who married Julien Richer and had 2 children), Estelle, Ga tane (who married Denis Huguet-Latour and had 2 children), Bernard (who had 2 children) and Jocelyne.

The exact year when he built the house is not known, but Antonio did add to it in 1941 to accommodate his growing family. However, he did renovate and expand his house before adding a 3rd section to the barn!

During the 2nd World War, Antonio's children were not yet old enough to contribute significantly by working on the farm, so a farmhand was hired, by the name of Mr. Jos Beaulieu. His salary was: room and board plus tobacco. It seems that Antonio thought he smoked quite a lot!

Antonio and his 2nd wife, Hilda

Just like many residents of Glen-Almond, Antonio delivered and sold the milk produced by his 17 cows to the cheese factory owned by Diana and Hermidas H bert. Until 1949, the milk delivery was made using a horse-drawn cart. In 1949, Antonio bought his first truck, which he could then use to transport the milk.

To supplement his income to provide for his growing family, Antonio started to grow and sell potatoes. His annual production was between 400 and 500 75-pound sacks. His children filled the sacks, which he then sold in Buckingham, going door to door through the town. He also used this opportunity to sell pork meat.

The breeding and finishing of pigs were Antonio's specialty. In 1949, the purchase of a truck allowed him to transport his own pigs to the Canada Packers Company, located on Lois Street, in Hull. His truck could transport up to 9 pigs, aged around 6 months and weighing up to 240 pounds each. His pigs were almost always rated A-1 at inspection. That is one reason why he became the subject of an article in the magazine "Le Bulletin des Agriculteurs" in June 1960.

To preserve the beef in winter, it was frozen, bagged and then buried among the oat grains in the granary to keep it frozen, because there was no freezer. Pork was placed in large stoneware pots, then doused with coarse salt, turning it into salt pork.

Antonio and Hilda with the children and their spouses - 1964

Having a family of 18 children, to which were added spouses and then grandchildren, it was virtually impossible for Antonio and Hilda to get them all together at the same time... however 2 dates were on everyone's calendar each year: Father's Day, with its picnic under the apple trees, and New Year's Day, with the big bash at the paternal home. All together, when you add neighbours and friends who dropped in, there would be close to 100 people present! Those were memorable evenings, with children running all over the house, while the women served supper, table after table, and washed the dishes, and the men sang folksongs in which everyone took part, challenging each other - some of the song names in French were:

Si tous les garçons du monde; La vie d'un garçon; Lac-Bouchette; La danse à St-Dilon; C'est dans l'temps du Jour de l'An; Le bon vin m'endort; Le cœur ne vieillit pas; Son voile qui volait, qui volait; Amusons-nous jeunesse; and many others.

And then, at midnight, they all wished Happy Birthday to "Gramps" Mercier, who was born on the 2nd of January.

The remainder of the year, there was Uncle Réal (brother of Antonio) who regularly visited his nephews and nieces, and these visits would keep us updated on everything that was happening with all the other members of the family! I remember the rocking chair where he always sat when he came to our home. Many years after his passing, it was still called by us "Uncle Réal's chair"!

We always had fun when we visited "Gramps" Mercier! We would climb to the attic using a staircase hidden in the closet of one of the bedrooms; we would play on a swing (a plank of wood hanging from the large tree near the house, and at the top of the hill), which made us feel like we were floating in the air; we would play "house" in the old hatchery, transformed into a miniature house; we would eat apples that had fallen from the trees; or we would leaf through the collection of Astérix and Tintin books in the bookcases of the living room. In summer, we would also go for a swim in Gramps' Lake on Mine Road. In winter, we would slide down the hill in front of the house.

Antonio died September 24, 1979, at the age of 73. At the time, he still owned his farm, which was located on Derry Road. In 1985, his youngest son, Bernard, bought the family farm from his mother and he sold in 2017.

Hilda joined her husband on August 8, 2008, passing on at the age of 96.
