A WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

Greetings to all!

At the last General Meeting of our Association, the term of our Board Members has been extended once again to 2022-2023. We thank all those who came to our Gathering in Lévis last September. In an upcoming issue of Le Mercien, you will see some pictures taken at the meeting, which had "reunions" as a theme.

In this issue, there is a third article by our retired police officer, Jean Racine, in which he concludes the story of his adventures as a security officer for our Premiers. There is also another article about Merciers from the Outaouais.

We are working on reviving our plan for a Gathering at Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu in 2023, based on currently inflated costs. We will report on this in a subsequent issue of Le Mercien.

Thank you for continuing to follow us. On behalf of the Members of the Board, we wish you all the best for the year 2023.

Let's all keep safe and we look forward to seeing you at our Gathering in 2023.

Jacques Mercier, no. 341, President

*By Jean Racine
“Bodyguard for Quebec Premiers from René Lévesque to Jean Charest.”*

In 1994, I wanted to lead a more normal life, so I asked my boss to be assigned to the security planning team for meetings of the Premier with official visitors. Kindly, my request was granted. I was then put in charge of organizing major security events. My first important assignment had to do with the visit of Mr. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, President of the Republic of Haiti.

The organization of such a visit took several days: it involved the location of the aircraft at the airport, including the red carpet, the organization of the road convoy including training the drivers, visiting and securing all of the locations involved, inspecting the main and alternate roads, planning for security measures and medical services that might be needed, where to set up roadblocks manned by police officers, and providing for a motorcycle squad that would precede the convoy. The planning was long and full of minutiae. The visit went quite smoothly, even though the first snowfall of the season could have complicated the work of the motorcyclist officers. At the last minute, the motorcycles were replaced with police cruisers.

There was a tradition in Quebec: when the Premier of Quebec was invited to France, the following year the Prime Minister of France was invited to Quebec. Thanks to the large number of such visits, I had the chance to prepare security plans and convoys for most of the Prime Ministers of France of the last few years. I will mention only the most important ones such as a visit by Michel Rocard in 1988, Alain Juppé in 1995, Lionel Jospin in 1997, Jean-Pierre Raffarin in 2002, and finally Dominique Villepin in 2005, although that last one was cancelled a mere few hours before he was due to arrive.

In 1994, Mr. Daniel Johnson replaced Mr. Bourassa as Premier. I was assigned to the preparation of visits and replacing the bodyguards. It was an election year. In order to ensure the confidentiality of party positions during this important period, the Sûreté du Québec assigned a full and independent security team to each party leader.

My task was to manage the team assigned to Mr. Jacques Parizeau's campaign. For once, I did not have to tour all around Quebec, which was quite beautiful, but would have been very exhausting, with three different locations to visit and secure every day.

Jean Racine, on the right, with Mr. Jacques Parizeau, at the launch of the 1995 Quebec Referendum campaign.

Mr. Jacques Parizeau had an impressive stature, and he was the first Premier whom everyone called MISTER. During his term, we witnessed the inauguration of an official residence for the Premier, on rue des Braves in Quebec City.

My boss asked me at the time to come back into the bodyguard team. I accepted his request, with some reservations, knowing all too well the hectic life that awaited me. The work of bodyguard is quite stressful. Some newcomers to the profession could not stand the pressure of such a work environment, and that was easy to understand.

At the time I was writing this, the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of René Lévesque was being celebrated and the statue of Mr. Parizeau was being unveiled. Seeing the statues of three premiers I had protected being erected on the grounds of the Assemblée nationale suddenly made me feel my age. Well, let's return to the story.

Quebec's credit rating on international markets worried Mr. Parizeau a lot. He had to travel to New York City on a regular basis. I was assigned the task of preparing for these visits as well as for the execution of them. I have to mention the exceptional efficiency of the Quebec delegation and its staff in New York City. I was in that magnificent city so often, that a lot of people thought that I was living there.

The story of the Quebec Referendum of 1995 would deserve several chapters. In 1996, Mr. Parizeau resigned as Premier. He was replaced by Mr. Lucien Bouchard, a man of action and always on the move. I experienced some beautiful moments at his side.

His involvement in managing the ice storm crisis was a significant moment in his term. He made an appearance on television every evening to keep Quebecers up to date on what was happening, making difficult decisions and visiting various locations during the day. We ended up later in the evening with him in a hotel without power or hot water.

Collection : Jean Racine

One of the important roles of a Premier's bodyguard was to ensure his protection during all the Premier's moves. Jean Racine, to the left of Mr. Lucien Bouchard during one of his trips.

Upon Mr. Bouchard's resignation early in 2001, Mr. Bernard Landry, a learned man like his predecessors, took over as Premier. The Peace of the Braves that confirmed the agreement with the Great Council of the Cree was certainly his proudest accomplishment.

Following the 2003 election, Mr. Jean Charest became Premier. Everyone who got to know him held him in very high regard. Unfortunately, politics is ungrateful to those who serve the people. As for myself, I have only good things to say about this great Premier.

Retirement from the Sûreté du Québec

It used to be mandatory to retire from the Sûreté du Québec after 32 years of service. That requirement had been withdrawn, but since I was approaching 35 years on the job, I announced that I was going to retire, not really expecting anything special. My career had not been easy, but I felt so privileged to have been a witness to everything that had happened during all those years.

I then experienced a series of surprises that make me tear up every time I look back on those days. I received the Excellence award for police work in 2004. That was the equivalent to an Oscar for police officers. It was granted by one's peers, through the police associations.

Jean Racine, on the watch, while Mr. Bernard Landry strolled through the crowd.

Mr. Jean Charest honours Jean Racine with the flag of the National Assembly upon his retirement.

As if that was not enough, the Director General of the Sûreté du Québec, Mr. Normand Proulx, gave me a stone statuette. He told me that these inukshuks were placed by the Inuit in the Great North. They were used amongst other things to help them find their way up there, just like a lighthouse in the night. What an honour it was to get such recognition from the head of my police corps.

In 2006 also, during the evening celebrating my career as I was retiring, Mr. Jean Charest appeared with his wife, Ms. Micheline Dionne. During his speech, he gave me the Quebec flag that had been flying over the National Assembly the day I retired. It is an honour that still moves me most deeply to this day.

From 2006 to 2013, I worked at the Coopérative des techniciens ambulanciers du Québec (CTAQ), spending two and a half years as Director of Operations and four years as Director General. Now, in 2022, at the age of 70, I have realized my dream of becoming a pilot. I now have my private pilot's licence and I am awaiting my commercial pilot's licence, while I finish my instrument flight rules training.

I thank you for taking the time to read this. I am very proud of being one of the grandsons of Louis Mercier and Délima Gagnon.

MERCIER FAMILIES IN THE OUTAOUAIS (Part 3 of 5)

Text by Denise Lauzon Carrière, daughter of Thomas Lauzon and Clémentine Mercier, November 2009.

MERCIER FAMILIES IN THE OUTAOUAIS

This is the third of five articles about Mercier families in the Outaouais. They are taken from L'histoire des familles de L'Ange-Gardien (The History of Families in L'Ange-Gardien), published in 2012. This text is reproduced with permission from the author's family, the author having passed away. The text remains unchanged from when it was first published in 2012.

Family of Thomas LAUZON and Clémentine MERCIER

Thomas Lauzon and Clémentine Mercier, daughter of Julien Mercier and Rose-Anne Lalonde, married on July 15, 1930. They had 11 children: Jean (Denise Guénette, 3 children), Claire (Edmund Daoust, 3 children), Donald (Agathe Laberge, 2 children), Denise (the late D'Arcy Carrière), Sylvio (Hélène Beaulne, 4 children), Gabrielle (Jean-Paul Laprade, 3 children), Suzanne (Neilon Venne, 2 children), Gérard (Hélène Desjardins, 2 children), Michel (Micheline Parisien, 5 children), Elzéar (Cécile Charette, 1 child) and Raymond (Francine Bisson, 4 children).

During the first year of their marriage, my parents remained in the region, but since my father could not find any work providing a reasonable income, he went to Timmins, in Ontario, at the time when my mother was expecting her first child in about a month and a half's time. She went to live in Buckingham with her sister-in-law until Jean was born, on May 26, 1931, and later on she went to join our father with her newborn. They lived in Timmins for 6 years; my father was working in the gold mines. Some spots having appeared on his lungs (caused by the dust from the mines), led to his coming back to the Outaouais region. They stayed with his brother Claude (Lauzon) and Claude's wife Éna, née Mercier and Clémentine's sister, until they had built their house on the adjacent farm that my father had just bought (a 200-acre farm that had not been cultivated for a number of years).

In the first year, an aunt of my father, she was a widow with several children, gave my mother a hen and her chicks, a gift that was greatly appreciated by my mother. They had a lot of work ahead of them, since there was not even one farm building up yet. They managed to build their house the first year and then the barn two years later. They were able to get a good income from the farm. They had about twenty dairy cows and they also raised pigs that my father sold mainly to Canada Packers in Hull. On the farm, my father also harvested some fir trees (Christmas trees) that he sold at the ByWard Market in Ottawa, for many years.

My mother, on the other hand, would buy cockerels in the spring and sell them in December. She tended a very large garden, and she made preserves for the winter months. She also had a strawberry field and she had planted some raspberry bushes in her large garden, producing enough to feed her family quite well, and also the large number of visitors, mostly relatives, who came in the summer. They loved my mother's pies.

One winter in the 1940s, my father managed to cut 100 cords of pulp wood which he sold to the MacLaren Company; the wood was floated down the Lièvre river in the spring.

For as long as I can remember, every spring or so, my father made maple syrup for the family. He would boil the maple sap in a huge cauldron set up over a wood fire outside. Around 1963, he finally built a maple shack and installed an evaporator. He would tap all the maple trees around the house as well as those on the mountain. For about ten years, he produced 300 gallons of maple syrup that he sold to people around Buckingham, and his family also loved his syrup. After the farm was sold to my brother Michel, one or two springs later, he started up again his syrup production. He loved that work.

(July 1980)*

In the early 1960s, my father started to sell some lots where several cottages would be built by the Lièvre River, which runs along the farm. The development went on and there are now about forty cottages, some of which have been winterized and are now occupied year-round on Lauzon Road.

In 1973, my parents moved to Buckingham to a house they had just bought and where they lived until they passed away in December 1992 and October 1993 respectively.

REPORT FROM THE PRESIDENT FOR 2021-2022

Dear Members, Ladies and Gentlemen,

After two years with all the limitations imposed by the pandemic, we ended 2021 exchanging multiple emails between Members of the Board to determine what to do next and to ensure the continuation of the content in our privileged link with our members through "Le Mercien".

Our first official meeting was held February 17, 2022, via video conference using the Internet link ZOOM. There were of course a few connection problems, but that was nothing, compared with previous years, when we had to travel to our meeting place in Daveluyville, Centre-du-Québec. Our Treasurer Lise St-André acted as Secretary for the meetings because our Secretary Aurèle Mercier was in poor health.

Except for sharing our worries concerning our next gathering, we discussed the need for the revision or reprint of the genealogical record of the Merciers from 2015. We agreed that updates would be done using a USB key format, because the paper version would be too voluminous. Mario Mercier has been working on that huge task despite all the difficulties involved. As for the digitization of our archives and their safekeeping, Gilmond Mercier is working on that very diligently.

Thanks to our FACEBOOK group, we have found proofreaders like Hélène Mercier and her spouse, as well as Laurence Mercier-Giguère, to help us revise the texts we publish. Lucie Mercier and Ian Campbell look after the English version of Le Mercien and Lise St-André does the layout and formatting. Many thanks to you all!

At our second meeting, held on April 20, 2022, it was decided to send out a short poll to our members to get their opinion about a possible gathering in 2022. At our third meeting, held on June 8, 2022, we were still looking for a location for our next gathering. At the following meeting on June 22, 2022, we agreed on the date of September 16, 2022 for a Gathering in Lévis. The President prepared a plan for that day, which was approved by the Board.

Through social networks such as Facebook, we try to keep in touch with a large number of Merciers from various fields. All are not members of our Association, but a lot of them are interested in their roots. Thanks again for following us in our genealogical efforts.
